Twelve layouts and one theme, and how to use them

01

Using the layouts

Pick a layout from Home → New Slide, then type into the prompts.

Make the title the point you want remembered

- Lead with the conclusion, then give the evidence
- One idea per slide; split any slide that needs two
  - Body text is 18pt and second-level text 16pt
  - Never go below 11pt on a slide that will be projected
- Put every source on the source line, not in the body

Source lines take the legislation, regulator guidance, policy section or list entry relied on

Use two columns to compare, not to fit more in

Good uses

- Before and after
- Two regimes or two options
- What we do and what we don't

Poor uses

- Overflow from a full slide
- Two unrelated lists
- Anything a table would show better

Source: add one if the columns make claims

Pair the detail with the one thing to remember

- Explain or evidence the point on the left
- Keep the key point to one sentence
- Use it at most once or twice per talk

KEY POINT

If the room remembers one sentence from this slide, it should be this one.

Source: add one if the key point is a claim

Show up to three numbers, each with its meaning

Theme to change when rebranding

Source: every number on a real slide needs one

Colour carries meaning, so use it the same way every time

Ink

#0B1526 · theme text1

Text, dark backgrounds, our own system

Indigo

#3446D4 · theme accent1

Emphasis, numbers, section dividers

Red

#C8261B · theme accent2

Blocked, declined, a breach or a hard stop

Green

#12805A · theme accent3

Proceeds, passed, no match

Amber

#B45309 · theme accent4

A named human decides here

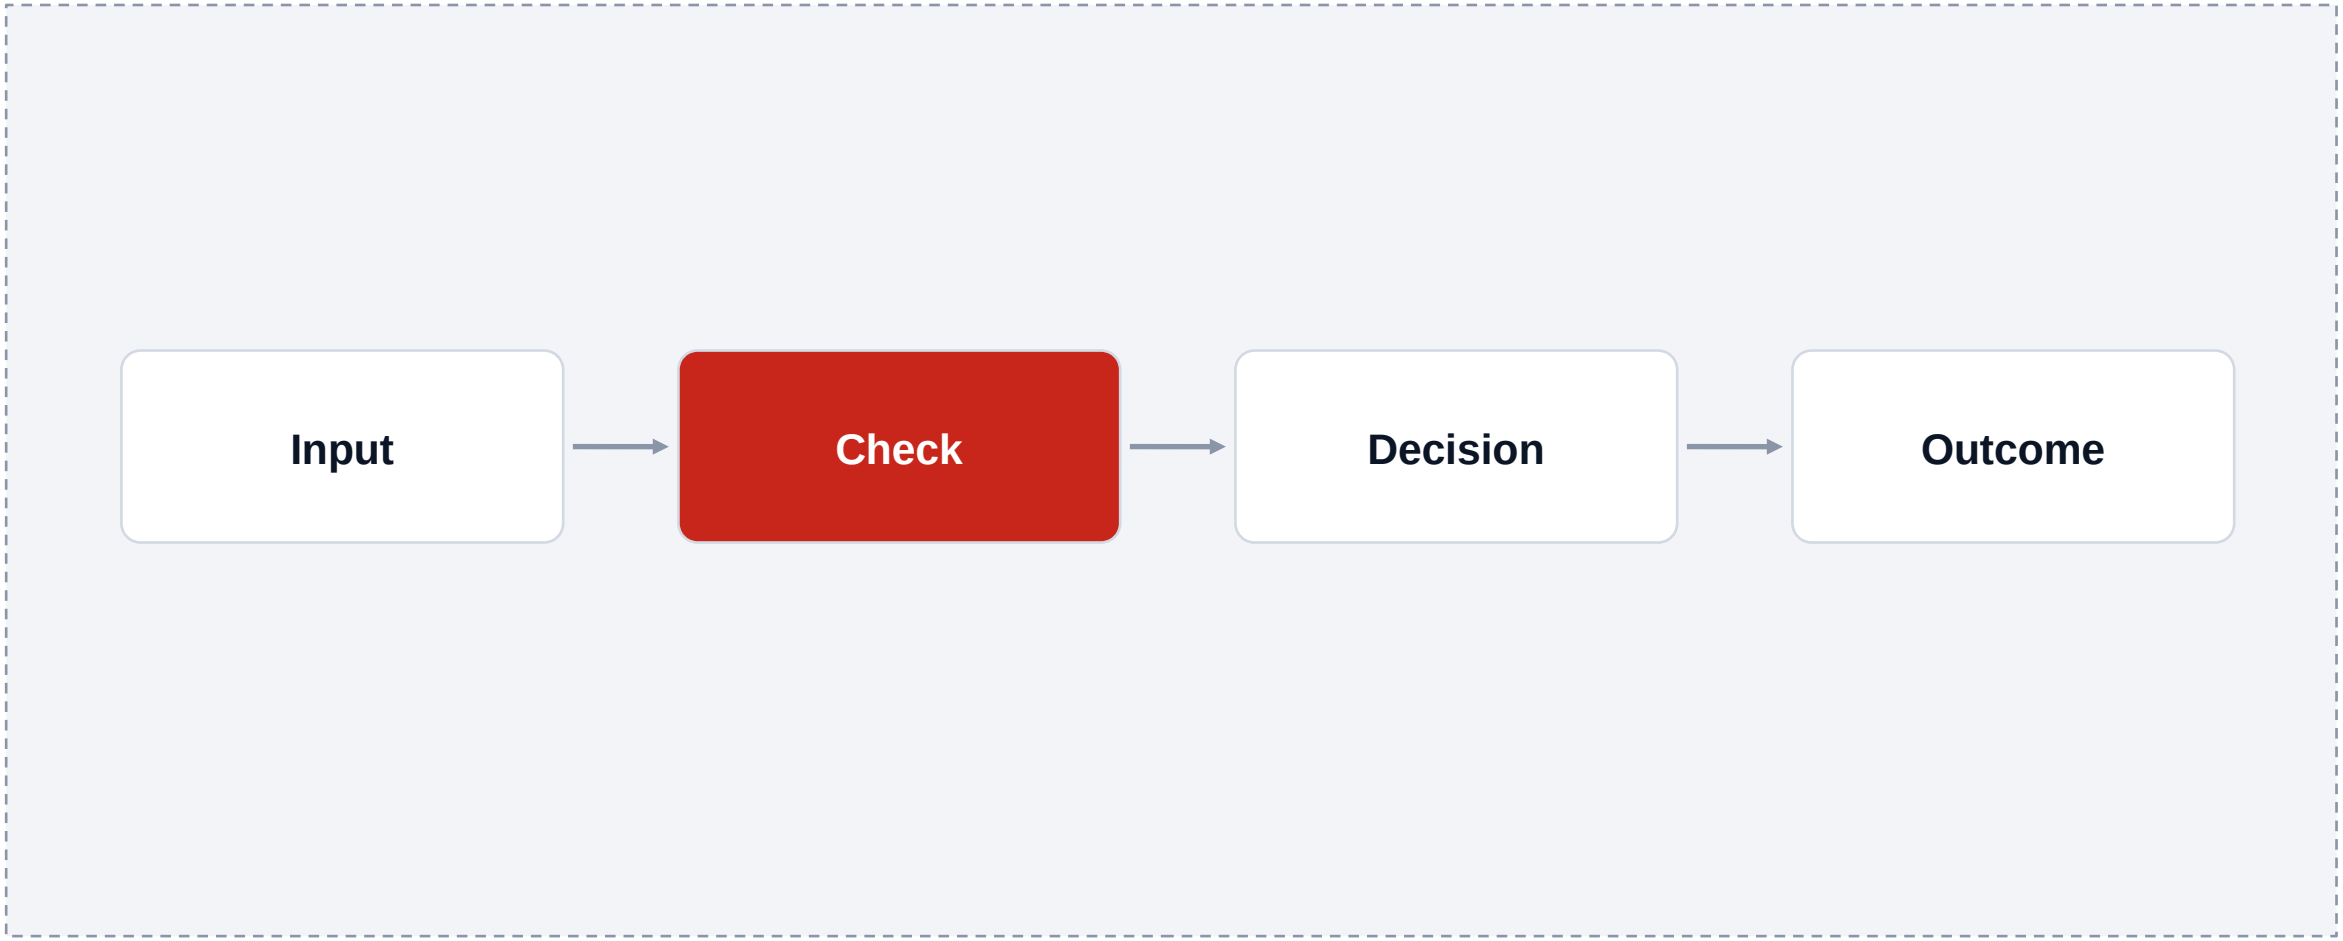

Slate

#8B95A8 · theme accent5

Connectors, secondary text on dark

Fonts: Arial throughout, so slides look the same on every machine

Build diagrams on the title-only layout, inside the content area

Content area: 0.6 in side margins, 1.75 in to 6.6 in from the top

End on three things to take away

01

Say the point

02

Show the evidence

03

Name who decides

Source: add one if the takeaways make claims

Say one thing, in one or two lines, and let it land.

Use for a principle, a quote or a turning point in the talk

Show a screenshot or diagram with what to notice

Insert a picture in the box on the left

Then say here what the audience should notice. Crop screenshots to the part that matters.

Source: credit the image if it is not ours
